Hi This Is Orville-

As you are all aware I am handing the baton to Tyra Tripp as SNGBMS President effective this month. I want to thank you for your support. Tyra is a teacher in Nevada and is anxious to get started as your President. Please throw your support to her as you did me and even more so as we move forward in an ever challenging world. Volunteerism is important in a club like this and without it things don't happen. Even what you may think to be small contributions add up to something big. Our hobby is important to us and the only way it can sustain and grow is if we are all involved in its future. Now let's go find some cool rocks.

Rock on!!

Orville Wiemers Jr

Hello Everyone -

I'm honored to serve as your president. I'm looking forward to my term and hearing from everyone. I want to reiterate Orville's comment about how every contribution of time helps. With so many members in our club, if everyone donates even one hour per month we could accomplish so much.

Tyra Tripp

Member Spotlight Jerry Hughes

Jerry grew up in the Bighorn Basin of Wyoming, in a coal town named Gebo. The town was abandoned after the mine played out in 1938. Jerry's father was a WWI veteran who worked in the coal mine.

Jerry attended the University of Utah to study pharmacy. He moved to Las Vegas, Nevada and purchased the pharmacy built next to Women's Hospital. The pharmacy was named "My Own Pharmacy" (MYOP), and Jerry ran it for 20 years.

Jerry's son began rock hounding when he was about 8 years old, so Jerry took his son to gem and mineral shows. Jerry joined the Las Vegas Gem Club (LVGC) and the Clark County Gem Club in the 1980s. There were a lot of hard feelings between the LVGC and the CCGC, so Jerry dropped out of the LVGC. He joined the SNGMS after it formed.

For SNGMS, he volunteered to be a Lapidary Supervisor. Beth Jones trained him.

Jerry built himself a 10 inch trim saw. He was always buying slabs and rough, but never had time to cut them. By 2009, Jerry had a trim saw, an oscillating lap, and a used slab saw from the Quartzsite show, and he finally began cutting his hoard. In the past, he sold cabochons at gem and mineral shows, but now finds the set up is too much trouble.

Jerry Hughes
December 2025

Jerry has a passion for agates and enjoys trips to Quartzsite. As he wanders from one end of the show to the other, he admires rocks as he goes (and maybe makes a few purchases).

Lapidary/Jewelry Studio Tips & Tricks Cabochon Setting Techniques

Choosing the Right Setting

The setting—the unsung hero of jewelry design! It ensures your cabochons stay put. Bezel settings are the bodyguards of the jewelry world, offering top-notch protection, but don't count out prongs and other methods—they've got their own charm and can hold their own in the security department. Some common methods of setting cabochons are discussed below.

Bezel Setting

Bezel settings are the most common way to set cabochons. A bezel is a strip of metal bent into the shape and size of the stone, but slightly taller and then soldered to the piece of jewelry. The cabochon is inserted into the bezel and the metal is bent over the stone, holding it in place.

Bezel Setting

Prong Setting

Prong settings use metal claws to hold cabochons in place. More stone is visible compared to a bezel setting. The prongs are cut with a notch and bent at the edge to fit over the top of the stone, holding it in place.

Flush Settings In flush settings, the cabochon is set into a drilled hole in the metal, with the top of the stone sitting flush with the surface.

Fossil Focus
La Brea Tar Pits, Los Angeles, CA

Excerpted from:

www.laalmanac.com/history/hi736.php, <https://thetouristchecklist.com/la-brea-tar-pits/>
<https://tarpits.org>

The La Brea Tar Pits are in the heart of Los Angeles, California and are one of the most famous fossil sites in the world. The La Brea Tar Pits don't actually contain tar. They are filled with asphalt. Tar forms from organic materials like wood, peat, or coal. Asphalt forms from crude oil seeping to the ground surface.

The pools of asphalt that seeped to the surface were only a few inches deep. However, even as little as an inch and a half of asphalt can trap a large animal. Scientists believe that animals (especially larger ones) only occasionally found themselves stuck in the goo to the point where they were unable to free themselves. Over a period of 40,000 years, even occasionally unfortunate animals trapped by asphalt left an enormous number of fossilized bones.

Asphalt is an amazing preservative. An incredible variety and number of extinct Ice Age animals have been recovered from the La Brea Tar Pits. More than one million bones have been found from more than 231 species of vertebrate animals. Plants and invertebrate animals have also been recovered.

La Brea Tar Pit Dire Wolf Fossil

La Brea Tar Pit fossils date from the very end of the Pleistocene epoch (the Ice Ages), from 11,700 to 50,000 years ago. The ratio of carnivores to herbivores is nine to one. Scientists believe that trapped herbivores attracted lots of carnivores. The carnivores, finding an animal trapped by asphalt and expecting an easy meal, also became trapped.

La Brea Tar Pit Excavation

Visitors can see fossil excavations in progress at the site. You can see scientists as they recover fossils from the pits. Consider purchasing tickets online in advance (<https://tarpits.org/>). There are often special rates for children and families. The George C. Page Museum, located on-site, is included in the admission price, and visiting both the tar pits and the museum is highly recommended.

Carved in Stone: The Story of Redrock Canyon's Sandstone Quarry

www.onlinenevada.org/sites/default/files/SandstoneQuarry_Rafferty_1985.pdf

Sandstone Quarry is one of the most popular sites at the Red Rock Canyon National Conservation Area (RRCNCA). This is a historic site with several multi-ton blocks of sandstone. The blocks were abandoned when the third try at quarrying sandstone ended in bankruptcy in 1912 and the quarry closed.

In 1905, the Excelsior Stone Quarry began operations and became one of the first industries in the Las Vegas, Nevada area. It was opened in 1905 by the Lyon-Wilson Construction Company of San Francisco. The quarry was expected to produce sandstone blocks for buildings in Los Angeles and San Francisco. The stone was cut into blocks of up to ten tons by a channeling machine, and then transported overland in large wagons to the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad siding in Las Vegas for shipment. A seventeen-ton steam traction machine, resembling a train locomotive, was used to pull the wagons, each loaded with two 10-ton blocks, to Las Vegas.

The tractor was named "Big Devil Wagon" and it used about 400 gallons of crude oil per day as fuel. The sandstone was then shipped by rail from Las Vegas to markets in San Francisco and Los Angeles for use as decorative building facades. The sandstone was high quality, but production was expensive and unprofitable. With the discovery of similar sandstone deposits closer to the railroad, the Excelsior Stone Quarry shut down in 1906. Later that same year, other operators reopened the quarry. Lincoln Sandstone Company, but it fell on hard times, and was reorganized as the Nevada Sandstone Company in 1910. Nevada Sandstone Company used a gasoline-powered traction engine called a caterpillar, which was more powerful and efficient than the old steam traction engine. Even with better equipment, the operation was still uneconomical. In 1912, cutting at the quarry ended again.

Sandstone Quarry is located about 2.7 miles out the RRCNCA Scenic Loop Road. Drive to the Sandstone Quarry Trailhead, then walk about 500 feet north to the quarry. The information signs and huge sandstone blocks can't be missed.
